

Filter-pin of spinning machine has head that is connected to the body inside which pin covered with filtering material is installed, this has perforation that is connected to central channel for passage of solution being filtered from body to pin, one end of this one is made conical. The pin has screw to hold filtering material at the side opposite to conical end. At the last one ribs for fixation of filtering material between the cone and the case are provided. At that perforation of the pin is made as rectangular through slot between the screw and the ribbed cone.