

Invention relates to working of metals by pressure. Method includes putting on metal strips of aqueous emulsion of surfactants, holding until its drying. The strips are additionally processed by steam directly prior to their introduction into the deformation area.