

Invention relates to the heat-power engineering. Lock contains a pipe with bubbling openings connected to the steam-conducting and overflow conduits and established in the housing with steam-removal branch pipe, horizontal plate and outflow steam pipeline. It is equipped with intake chamber and drain outlet secured on the housing, and outflow steam pipeline is located from the outer side of housing, moreover with the latter its upper end is connected under horizontal plate.