

An invention relates to the water treatment, particularly to the devices for the preparation of potable water with improved biological properties.

An installation contains device for the magnetic treatment, comprising fixed on external surface of pipeline section of influent water supply, made from diamagnetic material, two constant magnets, fixed relative to each other by opposite poles, and pipeline for the supply of influent water.