

The invention relates to refractory industry and may be used in the production of refractories intended for pouring steel as cartridges, dozers or other elements. A method for producing refractories comprises mixing zirconium dioxide with stabilizing and sintering additives, briquetting, burning briquette, grinding to fractions, preparation of bulk, shaping and burning articles. Zirconium dioxide is mixed with stabilizing additive with subsequent burning briquette or melting thereof.