

The invention relates to medicine. Assessment of coronary circulation in newborns is carried out by performing of echographic analysis of coronary artery. Additionally the resistance index of right coronary artery is determined by the Doppler echocardiography and if the index reduces to 0.55 and below or increases to 0.7 and above the coronary circulation abnormality is diagnosed.