

The invention relates to the transport. A device contains two blocks of magnetization located inside the rail track, between which the first and the second magneto-sensitive track sensors are coaxially mounted, the first is located inside the rail track near one rail with possibility of interaction with one of the wheels of the wheel pair. The device also contains a calculator and additionally the third and the fourth coaxially located track sensors.