

A blade clamping contact member is created where by contacting brim width reduction of its spring properties is improved. The invention relates to blade clamping contact members provided for mounting in carrier sockets of telecommunication systems and data transfer.