

The invention relates to food industry. Baking is carried out by means of hygrothermal treatment, intensive heat supply and additional baking. In the period of additional baking a heat flow falling onto dough half-finished products reduces in accordance with the linear law.