

The invention relates to medicine. An ointment contains an active material - derivative of quaternary ammonium compounds. Decamethoxine is used as an active material; the ointment is prepared on the starch-glycerin basis.