

The invention relates to special electrometallurgy. A method includes refining in cooled metal crystallizer of movable and immovable consumable electrodes composed of two units connected in series to the secondary winding of single-phase power transformer. The unit of movable electrodes is connected to the one output of the secondary winding of transformer, and unit of immovable relative to the crystallizer electrodes - to the second output.