

Method for study of gastric secretion with use of enteral stimulator includes processes of suction of the stomach content by means of thin pump, with study of basal secretion, with entering enteral stimulator, suction from stomach of this one, with determination of stimulated secretion and evacuation function of stomach. As enteral stimulator one uses solution of dried, fried chicory root. This invention relates to methods for study of stomach secretion with use of enteral stimulators.