

Invention relates to the hoisting means. Device contains supports, one of which is rigidly secured to the structure, tie, tightening device, catches of stretched state. The second support of device is executed with guiding detachable runners, which have set screws located with specific pitch; in this case the design of runners contains windows for tack weld of support to the lower belt of bridge span or installation of bolt assembly.