

Invention relates to rail transport. Device contains audible horn connected with conduit with a cylinder filled with compressed air. It is equipped with foot air pump connected by means of flexible conduit with the cylinder through detachable connecting pipe, and manometer with possibility of control of air pressure; moreover said audible horn is connected with the cavity of cylinder by means of control valve with spring-loaded handle.