

The invention relates to the sphere of electrochemical purification of wastewater, particularly, to the sphere of extraction of heavy metals by electrolysis and can be used in galvanizing plants practically in all enterprises. The process is realized by means of electrolysis with step control of current density depending on concentration of ions metal in electrolyte.