

The present invention presents the process of regeneration of the matrix of spent ion-exchange basic resin in the form of salt of hydrogen chloride and reduction of solution. The process includes the transmission of regenerating solution containing tertiary amine in amide solvent, treatment of obtained solution with anhydrous ammonia for precipitating chloride of ammonium and formation of solution and separation of regenerating solution from the precipitate.