

The invention relates to building production and can be used for regeneration of soft multi-layer coating made of bituminous materials, in particular at repair of roofing of any profile and any level of damage. The method is realized through heating roofing carpet through air gap by means of infra-red radiation with following layer rolling.