

The present invention relates to a process for hydrolysing biomass, and, more specifically, to a process for producing sugars through concentrated sulfuric acid hydrolysis of materials containing cellulose and hemicellulose.