

Invention concerns metal working by cutting and can be used for active monitoring with adaptive control of the process of cutting of metals on CNC metal-working machines, general purpose machines and automation lines, which implement the technology "Tontor".

Method consists in that the induction sensor is established on processing system, the sensor signal is amplified by channel of high sensitivity and channel of low sensitivity.