

The invention relates to rolling production. A spindle comprises a sectional shaft formed by wobbler heads. The cylindrical shoulder of one of the heads is placed in the cylindrical cavity of another head with a clearance equipped with a bushing made of elastomer that contacts with the flange freely mounted on the cylindrical shoulder and connected with the hollow wobbler head.