

The invention relates to rotary drilling of technological wells with machines with two and more executive devices and can be used at auger mill coal extraction. The method includes moving after drilling to designed depth of auger machine to new position by value equal to width of well and inter-well pillar, extraction of drill beams from drilled well and supply of those to auger machine for building up auger.