

The invention relates to optoelectronics. The device consists of light-emitting semiconductor devices, a beam waveguide and a photothyristor crystal placed on the base of the device by electrical connection of the first bond photothyristor area with the base and the first device terminal.