

The invention relates to the medicine and may be used in biochemistry, hematology, medicine, and medical industry. The method for isolating destabilase-prostanoid complex from the medicinal leech comprises the purification of the treated raw material following the multiple extractions with the organic solvent and the stripping of the lipid-soluble fraction.