

Invention relates to the food and processing industry and can be used in many branches of national economy for extraction of pips that are sensitive to mechanical damages at specific height.

Device includes the rake conveyor with feed bin, which consists of two closed pull chains with secured continuous scrapers located inside the chute established on the bed, that cover the end sprocket drive, which is connected with drive and tightening device.