

The invention relates to the surdotechnology and may be used for developing the hearing and correcting the speech both in healthy people and in patients with partial or complete hearing loss. The training device for hearing and speech contains the terminal appliance, the source of the signal, and the amplifier.