

Invention relates to the transport, namely to the units for detection of slipping of wheel pairs of transportation means equipped with electric drive with closed-cycle control system.

Unit contains sensors of slipping according to the number of pairs of traction electric motors made in the form of bridge circuits, two arms of each of which are the armatures of traction electric motors, and two of others - additional resistors, and the coil of the relay of slipping.