

The invention relates to the method of chemical infiltration of the material into fibrous substratum. The field of application of invention is the manufacture of articles made of composite materials containing fibrous substratum, or preform compacted by matrix.