

A device for thread feed has depressions through which bearing rollers go. The bearing rollers are installed at the side of the butt joint of the body in transverse direction with respect to the respective axis of rotation.