

The invention relates to obstetrics, in particular to pathology of pregnancy and delivery, and can be used for pre-clinic diagnostics of degree of severity of late gestosis. The method includes determination of total content of fractions of low-molecular peptides.