

The invention relates to fixation lock units, in particular to locks for handcuffs. The lock has body made of two placed in parallel with gap with respect to each other jaws connected by means of cramp.