

The invention relates to devices for bioelectrostimulation in sports activity and at treatment procedures. It solves a problem of device simplification and expansion of its functions – the use not only in a massage, but also in physical exercises the range of which at stimulation can be extended with the inclusion of exercises without tools and with tools.