

The invention relates to the metallurgical heating engineering, more concretely to the equipment of bell-type furnaces for annealing compactly wound and disposed in single stack rolls of cold-rolled steel sheet rolled metal. A guiding apparatus contains cylindrical body with bottom, disposed in the body supporting elements with forming circulation channels between them, and also circular disc disposed on supporting elements with forming internal stepped cylindrical and external circular cavities.