

The invention relates to the rotor for mixing devices, which are used in different fields of technology for mixing of two or more different substances in the form of particles or liquids.