

Invention relates to the field of shipbuilding, in particular, to the fin propellers with operating unit in the form of a rigid wing, which performs sinusoidal revolute translational oscillations.
Method is based on the change of angular amplitude of oscillations of wing in the dependence on the relative speed of wing.