

The method for the direction of cellular immune response against HIV-infected mammal cell includes action on the cell of an effective quantity of membrane binding protein chimerical receptor, which contains the fragment of the sequence of the specific amino acids.