

The invention relates to the industry of building materials, preferably, to methods for production of Portland cement clinker.

A method comprises supply of a raw mix by two flows, one of each is supplied from cool end of rotating furnace, and another one - into hot area.

.