

A radiator thermostat element having a housing and a pressure chamber arranged therein, which pressure chamber is enclosed by a capsule and into which a corrugated tube biased by a spring projects, characterized in that inside the corrugated tube there is arranged a plunger on which the spring acts and which bears with one end against the base of the corrugated tube, and in that between the other end of the plunger and the spring there is clamped a retaining element which is arranged in a seat in a housing element.