

The invention relates to the devices for sizing friable bulk material and can be used in chemical-recovery, mining and other branches of industry. A device includes a surface for sizing, which has a sifting area formed by shafts with figured disks mounted in staggered order on adjacent shafts with naves, and a drive.