

The invention relates to the means for the individual protection of the respiratory organs for the workers, namely to the dust masks and changeable filters. The filtering element consists of the layer of polymeric superfine fibers, the base plate, and the base of the element.