

The invention relates to the branch of machine building and can be used for strengthening by shock wave of the stress concentrators of metallic machine parts, which operate under conditions of elastic cyclic deformation, especially at simultaneous influence of liquid active media. The method is realized by mechanical action on their surface.