

The invention relates to the branch of machine building and can be used at installation of oil- and gas pipes for strengthening of the welds of metal tubes, and other components, by energy of shock wave. A method consists in that between the explosive charge and the weld the interlayer of inert material with acoustical stiffness lower than in the metal of pipe is located.