

The invention relates to area of medicine, in particular – to oncology, and can be used for monitoring of course of disease, individualization of tactics of treatment of patient and evaluation of effectiveness of treatment. The method is realized through determination if leukocyte affinity to antigens of organs of body.