

The invention relates to radar location and can be used in surface radar stations with non-sinusoidal pulse signals with nano-second duration for measurement of angle of elevation of low small targets. The method is in emission of periodic sounding signals by means of parabolic mirror antenna with radiator as vibrator and with counter-reflector, reception and indication of echo-signals of target.