

The invention relates to the rolling production and can be used for production of billets and rolled bar stock from ingots widened in the bottom part. A method includes successive reductions in two mutually perpendicular directions on the blooming mill, cutting of front and rear ends of the bloom, rolling on continuous-billet and section mills.