

The invention relates to oil-and-gas extraction industry, in particular to perforation of oil-gas bearing field represented with terrigenous collectors with high swelling level, in wells, at going out of drilling and at different stages of operation. The method includes pumping-in to well to interval of productive bed methanol with addition of 2-3 % of nonionic SAS with following perforation.