

A revolver has monolithic body with barrel, drum with chambers and strike-trigger mechanism. The chamber has narrowing section, with cross-section corresponding to cross-section of the bullet and coinciding with cross-section of the barrel, this is made smooth, and its length is smaller than the length of the cartridge.