

The invention relates to the medical apparatus, in particular the devices for magnetotherapy and may be used in physiotherapeutic departments of the clinics for improving regeneration of hard and soft biological tissues as well as in experimental and clinical medicine. The apparatus contains the driving generator connected to the coordinate counter, the output amplifier loading the operating induction coil and the unit controlling the output signal.