

The invention relates to the pharmaceutical industry, namely to the development of medical enterosorbents for the selective elimination of radionuclides from the body. The absorbent for the elimination of radionuclides from the body is based on the paligorskit modified by copper ferrocyanide containing the carbon-containing component modified by potassium, magnesium, and zinc ions.