

The invention relates to the field of machine-building, in particular to design of separator of roll bearing and can be used in production at making separators of plastic for roll bearings. Separator has two rings connected with partitions and forming sockets for rollers, local stepped lugs at sides of links, circular cavities at the outer side of the rings with transverse partitions.