

The invention relates to microbiology and concerns obtaining of physiologically active compounds from microbiological raw material, namely, methods of bacteriorhodopsin protein production from halophilic bacteria.

A method comprises preparation of nutrient medium and culture growing at maintaining of temperature regimen, aeration with air at luminescent lighting, biomass isolation and obtaining of lysate and end product from it.